Bad as the world is, respect is paid to virtue.

We must stand or fall by our own actions.

Never forget a kindness.

Good men will forgive those who injure them.

Merit will surely meet with a reward.

True courage, well directed, can not be overpraised.

Some men are fortune's favorites.

Ignorance is always pleased with itself.

Idleness is the sepulchre of a living man.

They live ill who always think of living.

Men of great qualities do not always succeed in life.
 He who can not see well should go softly.
 Discretion in speech is more than eloquence.
 He that lives on hope has a slender diet.
 He that will not be counseled can not be helped.
